Table to show items for sale at a local trading post in Malawi (March 2012) - place: Kayabwa
$\left.\begin{array}{|l|l|l|l|}\hline \text { Item (katundu) } & \begin{array}{l}\text { Where it comes } \\ \text { from (Kochokera) }\end{array} & \begin{array}{l}\text { How it reaches the } \\ \text { trading post }\end{array} & \begin{array}{l}\text { Price (mtengo) } \\ \text { in Malawi } \\ \text { Kwacha (£1= } \\ \text { c.MK250) }\end{array} \\ \hline \text { Tomato } & \begin{array}{l}\text { Fields near Bunda } \\ \text { (nearby town on } \\ \text { fertile hill) }\end{array} & \text { By bicycle } & \begin{array}{l}5 \text { small ones for } \\ \text { MK10 } \\ 5 \text { large ones for }\end{array} \\ \text { MK20 }\end{array}\right\}$

Notes on items for sale at Kayabwa's nearest trading post

Standard five pupils looked at 8 different food items for sale at the local trading post. They asked the vendors where the food had come from, how it had been transported to the trading post and how much it cost. The results are shown in the table above.

Although Lilongwe, the Capital of Malawi, itself is only about 6km away, many children at Kayabwa School are likely to visit the shops and markets there infrequently, if at all.

Other items on sale at the trading post were as follows:
Eggs
Soap
Onions
Flour (maize flour)
Bread
Cabbages
Firewood
Plastic bags
Flip flops
Shoes (second hand)
Bicycle parts
Door frames
Mandazi (a kind of doughnut)
Chips

There were probably other things there which we didn't notice.
Of course some of the food items, like sweet potato, are seasonal and other fruits/vegetable would be for sale at other times of year.

